

The Nation's Health, November 2008, Volume 38, No. 9

Nation

Motorcycle safety, helmets an issue as U.S. deaths increase: More than 5,000 U.S. deaths in 2007

Mapping technologies a growing health tool: Geographic information systems put public health on the map

Doctors often skip flu vaccination advice when talking with patients

Childhood vaccination rates high, but measles re-emerging

Drug, alcohol use continue to rise among boomers, fall for teens

Green building programs graded for impact on residents' health: Green homes should be healthy homes

Farmers, ranchers struggling with increasing costs of health care

Nation in brief

State/Local

California community health tied to partnering among stakeholders

States in brief

Globe

Report shows malaria burden still high, illustrates growing success

New HIV/AIDS care, prevention guides target increasing access

New ethics code targets recruiters of foreign nurses to United States

Globe in brief

General

Underage, intoxicated fans served alcohol at sports events, study finds

Guidelines offer methods for tackling problem of U.S. drugged driving

SAMHSA meetings, conferences to be held in smoke-free jurisdictions

Healthy You: Adults and shots: They're not just for tots

Health Findings

APHA News

Looking for APHA's Annual Meeting news?

APHA Advocates

APHA's Control of Communicable Diseases Manual updated, revised: 19th edition features new flu chapter

National Public Health Week 2009 theme unveiled: Focus is on "Building a Foundation for a Healthy America"

APHA members in four states can get discount on joint membership

APHA brief, forum explore economics of racial, ethnic health disparities

Get Ready Day events deliver preparedness tips: Second annual APHA observance marked by health departments

APHA members can become a part of new Association Cancer Forum

Journal Watch

President's Column: The future of public health: Where do we go from here?: Parting words from APHA's president

Student Focus

Students provide prescription for reforming nation's health system

Ohio public health students promoting fresh food, nutrition: Local farmers' market attracts thousands

Students in Brief